Vessels must vacate Australian ports ahead of lockout

Inchcape Shipping Services said vessels will need to leave Australia's Port of Newcastle and Port Kembla ahead of a lockout of Svitzer's harbour towage crews.

Gary Howard | Nov 16, 2022

Inchcape advised that all vessels that require tug assistance will need to be ready in all aspects to depart the port by the morning of November 17 ready for co-ordinated departures throughout Thursday and Friday morning.

Svitzer will not tow vessels in or out of the 17 Australian ports it operates in.

“Based on current advice, there will, in all likelihood, be no harbour tugs available for any purpose from noon on Friday 18 November 2022 at Port Kembla,” said Inchcape.

For the Port of Newcastle, vessels have been asked to vacate due to the expected lack of tugs available to respond to any emergencies.

“Based on current advice, the port will be limited in which vessels can enter port this week due to the fast turnaround required and limited/uncertain towage available,” said Inchcape.

Svitzer’s lockout is currently being considered by Australia’s FairWork Commission, which has the ability to terminate or suspend protected industrial action for reasons including causing significant damage to Australia’s economy. The Commission’s hearing is set to continue on November 17.

Svitzer Australia announced on November 14 that it had given notice of a lockout to all of its harbour towage employees covered by its 2016 pay deal, including members of the Maritime Union of Australia (MUA), The Australian Institute of Marine and Power Engineers (AIMPE) and the Australian Maritime Officers Union (AMOU).

The lockout will begin at 1200 hrs AEDT on November 18 and run indefinitely, Svitzer said.

“This is harming Svitzer’s ability to reliably, safely and efficiently serve our shipping customers and port operations around the country and is causing serious disruption to the national supply chain which is reliant on shipping,” the company claimed.

Svitzer said it has been negotiating the contract with the unions since 2019 and has seen over 1100 instances of notified industrial action since October 2020.

“We had hoped it would never come to a lockout – but we are at a point where we see no other option but to respond to the damaging industrial action underway by the unions,” said Nicolaj Noes, MD Svitzer Australia.

MUA National Secretary Paddy Crumlin called Svitzer’s lockout “supply chain sabotage.”

Crumlin, who is also the President of the International Transport Workers Federation (ITF), said: “Svitzer’s workers have continued to turn up, work hard and contribute not only to the massive profitability of this successful company but save lives and protect Australia’s coastline during daring rescues of stricken cargo ships.”

Assistant Secretary of the MUA, Jamie Newlyn said: “Svitzer representatives have repeatedly turned up to negotiations with sudden and unreasonable demands which they know will derail the negotiation process and undermine the prospect of a mutually agreeable outcome.”

Port of Houston box volume grows 18% in first 10 months 2022

As container volumes shift from the US West Coast to East Coast terminals the Port of Houston handled over 3m in the first 10 months of the year.

Michele Labrut | Nov 24, 2022

Container volumes grew 18% year-to-date at Port Houston's terminals, passing the 3m mark at 3.33m teu and in October box volumes returned to double-digit growth, continuing the trend seen throughout 2022, with an increase of 13% compared to October 2021.

Loaded container teu reached the highest volume ever and increased 21% compared to the same month last year.

"Although import demand in the US appears to be slowing, we have not seen any slowdown in Houston in recent months. We are handling record amounts of cargo and remain focused on aggressive infrastructure development to optimise capacity and efficiently handle current and future demand through our port," said Roger Guenther, Chief Executive Officer of Port Houston.

One change that was announced last month is the addition of new dwell rates. A sustained import dwell rate is expected to be implemented early next year to address long-term container dwell levels.

"The additional dwell rates are intended to minimise container storage at the terminal. Boxes must move quickly through the terminal to maintain a fluid environment and a superior level of service for our customers," Guenther said.

Total tonnage at Port Houston grew 18% in October and 25% for first ten months of 2022, compared to last year.
